'Hardly. You can fer—ferule me, and I will go home,' she said, while her cheeks crimsoned with shame.

Mr Stone bit his lips to keep back a reply which rose involuntarily to them. Again was that tender white hand before him waiting meekly for its punishment, now weak and trembling from illness. Did she think him a brute? Quite evidently, from her action.

'I—I—regret that I wounded your feelings on Tuesday,' she said, raising her eyes to his face. 'I am thoughtless, I hope not heartless. Will

A sufficient explanation.—Tom—'What ails your eye, Joe?' Joe—'I told a man he lied."

We like the honesty of the Quaker, whose son, a clergyman, having received several "calls," asked him which he would advise him to accept. "As thee preaches for money," said the old man, "thee had better take the one that pays most."

As three or four members of the old volunteer fire department were talking, the other day, of the strength and skill of Capt———, of No —, and explaining to a listener how steadily he used to hold the pipe, and put the stream on the right spot, "Ah, said the listener, "I see—an ex-spurt."

Many have been the discussions in regard to the essential distinction between matter and spirit. Punch some time ago tried to settle the question in this sharp, short way: "What is mind? No matter. What is matter? Never mind. What is the soul? It is immaterial."

Indian Summer.

At the open window I sit and see
The gorgeous clouds that are passing by,
And the soft south air is bringing to me
Perfumes as sweet as in June buds lie;
Even the bees are humming to-day,
And I catch the sound of children at play.

Did I not see the changing leaves
Brilliant in coloring as the sky,
And the reapers binding their golden sheaves,
I should say the summer had not gone by;
It seems as if nature had paused to think,
Before it should reach October's brink.

But with every breath of the scented breeze
There is rustling down a withered leaf,
And I hear the sighing among the trees
That is like the prelude to a grief;
And though the sun shines with a splendor like June,
By this I should know 'tis a fall afternoon.

At the open window I sit and see
Clouds that are passing—hopes that are past,
And the soft south air is bringing to me
Memories crowding thick and fast;
And some of the dreams I recall to-day
Are swept like the withered leaves rustling away.

At the open window I still remain,
And my soul is vainly trying to see
Over the losses—on to the gain,
Knowing how much that gain would be;
Teach me, Oh teach me, how to wait
For the Summer so endless—Heaven so great.
